DIA: A YEAR IN THE LIFE

Change of Directorship

LTG Ronald L. Burgess Jr. takes the DIA flag from Undersecretary of Defense for Intelligence James Clapper, signifying the change in directorship. LTG Burgess succeeded LTG Michael Maples to become DIA's 17th director, and he also took command of the Joint Functional Component Command for Intelligence, Surveillance and Reconnaissance for U.S. Strategic Command.

John Powers, right, gives DNI Dennis Blair an overview of the DIOCC during Blair's first visit to the DIAC.

DNI Makes First Visit to DIAC

Director of National Intelligence Dennis Blair visited the DIAC July 17. This was Blair's first trip to the DIAC since assuming the position of DNI. He received a broad overview of the agency from LTG Ronald Burgess, and a variety of briefings from subject matter experts on Defense CI and HUMINT, intelligence operations management and the defense intelligence analysis enterprise.

Phase II Command Civilians Transition to DIA

Approximately 764 civilians became DIA command employees on Oct. 12, 2008, as the second phase of the JIC/JAC MIP Implementation Study (JMIS) transition was completed — putting the majority of DIA's employees outside of the National Capital Region. Civilian J2 employees from AFRICOM, EUCOM, JFCOM, PACOM and SOCOM transferred as part of Phase II. CENTCOM, NORTHCOM, SOUTHCOM, STRATCOM and TRANSCOM J2 civilians became part of DIA in October 2007 under Phase I.

Extra, extra — read all about it! As we put another Year in the Life "to bed," I couldn't help but think back to the days when we sent employees out with disposable cameras on a set day to photograph their colleagues, usually grinning at their desks. We've certainly come a long way with both technology and the photos we receive. We now have shots from all over the globe, representing our very diverse and dispersed work force. But one thing remains the same: this wouldn't be possible without our hard-working Communications Board reps and their volunteer photographers, all listed below. Thanks for capturing these moments and helping us showcase DIA in such a fun and unique way.

DIRECTOR, DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

Like each of you, I count myself lucky and honored to serve our nation as an intelligence professional during this critical time in our history. And it is a special privilege for me to have assumed command of the Defense Intelligence Agency this year.

While we are united in sharing the distinction that accompanies our special mission, many of us are nevertheless separated by geography, targets, time and different mission disciplines. For the first time in nearly half a century, the majority of DIA employees work outside the Washington, D.C., area.

This photo essay provides a candid and personal look at an agency engaged in the nation's most sensitive work around the world, including in direct support of our military forces. As you can tell from the photos, we do so with a focus on the mission, determination and often a healthy sense of humor. This collection reminds us that, while we should take pride in our individual offices and directorates, we are part of a larger agency with a well-deserved reputation for excellence, honesty, integrity and a willingness to cooperate with partners and allies.

As you look through these pages, take pride in your contributions, and your special service with the Defense Intelligence Agency.

9/11 Memorial Dedicated at DIAC

In a ceremony held at the DIAC Sept. 11, past and present agency leaders dedicated a memorial to the seven DIA employees who lost their lives in the attack on the Pentagon Sept. 11, 2001 — Rosa Chapa, Sandra Foster, Robert Hymel, Shelley Marshall, Patricia Mickley, Charles Sabin and Karl Teepe.

Speakers at the ceremony included current DIA Director LTG Ronald Burgess Jr. and retired VADM Thomas Wilson, who served as DIA director from July 1999 to July 2002. Families of four of the lost DIA employees attended the dedication ceremony, along with members of the work force.

"The memorial will stand as a permanent part of this agency in the same way our lost colleagues will remain in our hearts and memories," said LTG Burgess. "More than others, this day reminds us of the dangers and threats we face and the importance of our mission in providing the military intelligence required to defend this nation."

No need to mark it down, it's a day we'll always remember,
The year is 2001, the day is 11 September.
Nothing was more amazing than those scenes of devastation,
Except immediately thereafter, when we began a creation.
A creation of longed for unity, unity longed for indeed,
A creation which joined together all colors, regardless of nationality or creed.
See, it was not the last straw per say, and definitely not the ending,
It was more of an awakening, maybe even a beginning.
